Information about the town and/or neighborhood	Ugíjar is a small village placed in the well-known Alpujarra in Granada, in the South of Spain. It is a rural area half way between Granada and Almería, mainly formed by several small villages. Surrounding the area we find Sierra Nevada, the most important mountains in Granada, Gádor and Lújar Mountains and the so-called La Contraviesa, the range that separates these villages from the Mediterranean Sea, which is not too far. Thus, the surroundings offer a great variety of hiking and trekking activities in the quiet nature.

Ugíjar territory is about 66,9 Km<sup>2</sup>, with a population of 2500 inhabitants approximately, and it has an altitude of 559 m above sea level.

There are several options for accommodation in the area, with excellent restaurants and different kinds of shops and basic services.

In addition, such a privileged situation lets our visitors spend a wonderful time by living here and visiting the nearer villages, which have a special attractiveness.

Ugíjar has a very interesting historical past, since it once was considered the capital city of La Alpujarra, which provided the village with magnificent majestic houses and monuments.

It was defined by Pedro Antonio de Alarcón (Spanish writer) as “aristocratic”, and the Swiss Jean-Christian Spahni, a distinguished traveller from the 1950s, considered Ugíjar as the most picturesque village in La Alpujarra.

It is the biggest and most important village in the area and people living in the near villages frequently come here for shopping.

Students from all these villages attend our high school, including students from Alpujarra de la Sierra (formed by Mecina Bombarón and Yegen), Nevada (formed by Picena, Laroles, Júbar and Mairena), Bérchules, Cádiar, Juviles, Lobras, Murtas, Turón and Válor (formed by Válor, Mecina Alfahar and Nechite).
